

Koa's Adventure

My name is Koa. Last year mom, dad and I went to the beach. We went to a big black sand beach on a Sunday. One of the waves was bigger than the biggest rock there, so dad told me I cannot surf. I got bored so I went for a walk.

I found a tunnel going up the cliff, so I knew I had to climb. I went through the tunnel. It was so dark and hard to climb through. It was so scary, but I kept going because I wanted to see the opening. I kept going to the light and I heard someone was talking. I could barely understand then I realized they were speaking in Hawaiian. I looked and saw native Hawaiians. The men were wearing clothing from 300 years ago and now I knew that the tunnel was a time machine. They were Kamehameha's soldiers going to war I saw one of them had a spear and looked to the left and there were lots of spears. I wanted to go to war but I was scared to go by myself, so I decided to ask dad to come with me.

It took us one hour to get through the tunnel. When we got through, we saw men placing boats on the water. We jumped on and we flipped the boat. They realized something was wrong, "How did we get flipped?", one native Hawaiian said. And we got it back upright and went to war. We were so happy we won the war. When we got back from the war, we went back where we came from and mom was waiting for us at home, she texted she cooked delicious food.

By MJ P.